

The technology discipline concerned with the machinery and systems of ships and other marine vehicles and structures.

Marine engineers are responsible for the design and selection of equipment and systems, for installation and commissioning, for operation, and for maintenance and repair. They must interface with naval architects, especially during design and construction

NEMO project

Development and Demonstration of a Novel Technology for an Integrated After Treatment of Ship Flue Gases